Susan,

If you go to page 11 of the Draft Best Practices document from workshop #1 we need to provide comments by May 22, you will see the draft text I would like you to look at to see if you have an opinion or thoughts about what the permit would actually need to cite for helping the public understand the underlying credits – and the projects represented by the credits.   I searched Willamette Partnership's website and they combine their explanations about credit protocols & project creation with the processes for credit verification and registration. Perhaps it's worth a more detailed discussion with them to talk about what part would/could be cited in the permit for where the public could view the credits themselves.

In the meantime, here are three links for you to look at.

- Go to Verification & Registration page 21 of the document/ page 24 on the screen

See slide 38 for a snapshot of the registry screen run by Markit Environmental Registry, who Willamette Partnership selected to actually administer the credit tracking, and where credits are moved from sellers' accounts to buyers' accounts/
